SMOKING SPIRITUAIZED.

[From an old English Poem written in 1670, and attributed to Mr. G. Withers.

Though green at noon, cut down at night, Shows thy decay; All flesh is hay: Thus think, and smoke tobacco.

This Indian weed, now withered quite,

The pipe so lily-like and weak, Does thus thy mortal state bespeak; Thou art e'en such-Gone with a touch : Thus think, and smoke tobacco.

And when the smoke ascends on high,

Then thou behold'st the vanity Of worldly stuff, Gone with a puff : Thus think, and smoke tobacco.

And when the pipe grows foul within, Think on thy soul defiled with sin; For then the fire It does require :

Think thus, and smoke tobacco. And seest the ashes cast away, Then to thyself thou mayest say,

That to the dust

Return thou must : Think thus, and smoke tobacco.

Life on Shipboard.

The trial and conviction of Capt. John A. Holmes, at Portland, for cruelty to a sailor named commanded, and from which Chadwick died, point to the need of good temper on the part of the officers of vessels, and if they must resort to punishment, that it be administered judiciously. During the past few years, we have had occasion to record an unusual number of violent deeds on shipboard, some on the part of officers and others of crews, many of them ending in death, and in the conviction and execution of the guilty parties.

These cases are, of course, the exceptions to the general administrations of affairs on shipboard, else we should have to record them far oftener. Yet there is nothing more common than to find persons who sincerely believe (or pretend so to do) that life at sea is a mere chronicle of brutalities on the part of a master to his crew, or of the latter to their officers. These considerate critics presume the first thing done on deck in the morning is for the second mate to knock down a few hands with a marling spike, tie up a cook or steward by the thumbs, and that officers generally pass their time in growling and swearing, rasping and

Such considerate judges convert each painful case brought to light as the general rule on board ship. That there are cruel and brutal deeds com- each other in squadrons of ten or twelve together, there should be properly only justice and fair and biting and tearing each other with the most dealing as well on shipboard as on shore. But the conclusion to be drawn is plain. Let owners see to it, as far as possible, to appoint only good and bonorable men to places of trust, and let there be more care in the selection of crews. Improvement may still be made in these directions, as in every other department of human industry and occupa-

Let every ship that is sent out be provided with a decent supply of books, with something to divert and instruct the mind as well as merely to feed the body. It is from the want of some subject frequently to interest the thoughts in the weary monship as if they could not keep their hands from laying out their surplus ideas upon the hide of poor Jack. Let there be more means provided for entertainment and more attention paid to the fact that man is a creature needing a spice of variety in his avocations. The mere fact of a good musician in a crew has often kept the men cheerful on a long voyage, and if the captain has a habit of looking on the bright side of things his influence will be like sunshine on the forecastle .- New Bed-

The effect is astonishing." An enlightened public does not reflect on these things at present, but will again by-and-by. Looking with human eyes over the England that now is, and over the America and the Australia, Dodworth's Hall, N. Advertiser tells the following bear story: "Last ardent spirits do you now?" and he said, 'I can Saturday morning a week, while a laborer living drink it through you.' at Fort Gratiot was proceeding in a boat to Port Huron, he came up with a huge bear, swimming across. He struck his bearship a blow over the head with his oar, when the enraged animal made for him, and climbing into the boat, compelled the man to take to the water. The bear then followed him, and the man contrived to get into the boat isfied with the "turn of affairs," until Tuesday again. A neighbor seeing his predicament, came to his relief with an axe, and broke up this pleasant little game of 'tag' between the man and bear, his wife without incumbrances, and then kicked by breaking in the latter's head. He was killed them both out of doors. The kicking brought the and brought ashore. Anglophobia.

This great English people, with so many good and solid qualities, is infected by one vice, which corrupts these very qualities themselves. This rooted, all-poisoning vice is Pride. This self-adoration, this internal worship of the creature for its own sake is the sin by which Satan fell; the height of impiety. This is the renson that with so many of the virtues of humanity, with their seriousness and sobriety of demeanor, and with their biblical turn of mind, no nation is further off from grace. They are the only people who have been unable to claim the authorship of the Imitation of Jesus; a Frenchman might write it, a German, an Italian, never an Englishman. From Shakspeare to Milton, from Milton to Byron, their beautiful and sombre literature is skeptical, Judaical, Satanic, in a word, anti-Christian. " As regards law," as a legist well says, "the English are Jews, the French, Christians." A theologian might express himself in the same manner as regards faith. The American Indians, with that penetration and originality they so often exhibit, expressed this distinction in their own fashion : · Christ," said one of them, " was a Frenchman whom the Jews crucified in London; Pontius Pilate was an officer in the service of Great Britain."-

The Boston Transcript says: "Ship builders at East Boston have in course of construction in their yard a small steamer, which is to be propelled in a novel manner. She is built as an experiment, the inventor being furnished with funds to construct her, by some of the leading ship builders in this city. The hull is fifty-two feet long, and thirteen feet wide at the stern, and tapers gradually to the bows, which are very sharp. She is five feet deep. On deck, she will have a cabin nineteen feet long. She will be worked by an engine of twelve horse power, to which will be attached the propellers-one at the stern, three feet in diameter, to work in the water, and one at the stem, eight feet in diameter, to work in the air. The air propeller is attached to a shaft which connects with the engine, and also with the water propeller at the stern. It is supported by a post at the stem. Both propellers will be worked by steam. The smoke-pipe will lay horizontally on the deck. The inventor is confident that by this arrangement he can easily get 25 to 30 miles an Chadwick on board the ship Therese, which he hour speed out of this eraft. We understand that the invention has been tried on a small boat in our harbor, and has worked admirably. The hull is completed, and ready for the machinery, which is being made in Roxbury. It is expected that the vessel will be ready to make her trial trip by the middle of December."

FIGHT BETWEEN ELEVEN HUNDRED HORSES .-Southey, in his History of the Peninsular War, relates the following: "Two of the Spanish regiments which had been quartered in Funen were cavalry, mounted on fine black, long-tailed Andalusian horses. It was impossible to bring off these horses-about 1,100 in number-and Romano was not a man who could order them to be destroyed; he was fond of horses himself, and knew that every man was attached to his heast, which had carried him so far and so faithfully. Their bridles were therefore taken off, and they were turned loose upon the beach. A scene ensued such as was never before witnessed. They became sensible that they were no longer under the restraint of any human power.

A general conflict ensued, in which, retaining the discipline they had learned, they charged mitted, and by far too many, we cannot doubt, as then closely engaged, striking with their fire feet, ferocious rage, and trampling over those who were beaten down, till the shore, in the course of an hour, was strewn with the dead and disabled. Part of them had been set free on rising ground at a distance. They no sooner heard the roar of battle, than they came thundering down over the intermediate hedges, and catching the contagious madness, plunged into the fight with equal fury. Sublime as the scene was, it was too horrible to be long contemplated, and Romano, in mercy, gave orders to destroy them. But it was found too dangerous to attempt this, and after the last boat had quitted the beach, the few horses that otony of a sea voyage, that officers go about the remained were still engaged in the dreadful work of mutual destruction.
